settlement of their present difficulty with France over their power is so undermined as to be unable to cope with addition to it. The Emperor, we believe, has some consciousness of the danger, and his anxiety for a peaceful settlement was no doubt largely due to this.

The naval engagement at Foochow was certainly about the boldest thing we have ever heard of in the way of fighting. The Frenchman-of-war engaged in the attack numbered eight in all, and only one of these was an armoured clasp. To oppose them the Chinese had one corvette and ten gunboats, two of them armed with guns capable of sinking any of the French vessels. The force, we believe, mounted Krupp guns, and the Chinese had no lack of troops to work them. A number of war junks were also collected near the Arsenal. The Chinese had therefore to all appearance a respectable display of force to oppose to the French. They had shown no little defiance of the enemy before the fight, and when the signal was given by Admiral Courbet to open fire the Chinese replied instantly. But when the withering effect of the storm of shot and shell that belched from the French ships was seen the courage of the Chinese sailors faded at once. They abandoned their guns, threw themselves into the water, and generally displayed the panic of fright. There was no one to rally them; the fan-bearing, pipe-smoking, lazy drones who are supposed to be officers were probably the first to seek their safety. The Chinese are not a fighting race, but they might be converted into a fighting force if they were properly disciplined and led. But this will never happen so long as they are officered by men whose only qualification is a moderate acquaintance with the Chinese classics. As a rule they know nothing of military tactics, less of navigation, are deplorably deficient in personal courage, and are neither amenable to discipline themselves, nor capable of enforcing it in the ranks. The remarks of the Tientsin correspondent of a Shanghai contemporary on this subject, when describing the unpleasantness that attend the life of a foreign officer in the Chinese service, are much to the point. As this writer truly says, all the efforts of the foreign instructor are neutralized by the indolence, indifference, or corruption of the native officer in command. The correspondence on the way to draw the following picture:—A naval officer has to see continual breaches of discipline encouraged or sanctioned by the Admiral. He may propose a certain course of discipline, such as strict gunnery drill, drill at marks, sailing in station, etc., but the Admiral is sure to be averse. Then the officer must look out and see queuing, or what we call peccolition, going on in coal bills, wages, stores, etc., and must say nothing. The crew and officers cook all day and cannot be stopped. From the Admiral to the galley-boy all exhortations are profane on the decks, and remonstrance is unavailing. The cabins are kept dirty, and the officers are uncivil or untidy, the Admiral likes to have his fair corporation in hot water, just as a Shanghai shopkeeper does, and trouble is received with insult. If he then goes on to make the following prediction:—The consequence is, there is no navy and no army. There are some vessels with ill-disciplined and untrustworthy crews, and there are on land various units of men with rifles. If the French come to be in earnest, and send out a sufficient force, all the Chinese squadrons and Chinese forts will be counted as nothing against a well trained army. The correctness of this prophecy has been fully demonstrated by recent events at Foochow. Had the Chinese been amenable to discipline and properly officered the French would not have had such a walk over. In any naval encounter or attack the French may safely count upon an easy victory, and they may so outnumber a thousand of their troops as to make for seven times that number of Chinese. Where the French are likely to sustain reverse is in attempting to hold Tientsin with a sprinkling of soldiers against the hordes of the Chinese Government can let loose upon the country from Yunnan, Kwangsi, and Kweichow.

On the 20th inst. the Tansu-Yin Yamen sent a telegram to Tientsin to have taken aboard.

The French Consul at Canton, M. Scherer, arrived here yesterday. The Viceroy, we hear, had been anxious that he should take his departure for some days past.

The Chinese and Manchu steamers, Generals, which had been ordered to leave Canton, were over to the quarantine ground. She will proceed to the Kowloon dock today.

There was a good deal of heavy gun practice at the fort on Dana's Island near Whampoa yesterday morning. The firing could be heard in Canton, and was going on when the Formosa rounded the river.

The Emperor (says the Courier) that the Chinese Government has arranged a loan of two million taels from a certain German firm, and that the 500,000 had already been delivered at the Canton treasury.

It is contemplated (says the Courier) by the Chinese authorities to build a brick wall commencing at Taku up to Shan Hai-kuan, a distance of 220 miles. The wall will be some fifteen feet high and strengthened by a mud embankment of about 12 feet in thickness.

It is notified that the Canton night boats will continue to run as heretofore. This is not due to any alteration of the Chinese arrangements, but is managed in this way. The boats will leave Hongkong as usual, and proceed to the mouth of the Chang, and will there anchor till daylight, when they will proceed up to Canton.

The Sinpo received a telegram from Tientsin to the effect that the Dowager Empress had decreed that the Commanders and Generals along the coast ports were to be allowed to act on their own discretion in fighting should the French attack them, and that they will not be required to ask the Throne for instructions.

The Tientsin of Ningpo has issued a notification that the harbour of Tientsin is being made perilous to enter for ships without a proper pilot, whose services can be obtained on application at the Chinese Customs at Tientsin. The Chinese authorities that all is quiet at Ningpo, according to latest advices.

We regret to have to record the death of Mr. W. McKinnin, Fourth Master of the Central School. Mr. McKinnin has been suffering for some time from an affection of the lungs, and a few days ago had to go to a hospital. During Wednesday night he had a severe attack of coughing, during which he burst a blood vessel, after which his strength rapidly failed, and he died at five o'clock yesterday. Mr. McKinnin was a member of the Masonic Fraternity and was the Junior Warden of Zealand Lodge.

spoke the Olebo.—China is very restless. In spite of her own bitterness it is always troubling something. The Eastern Review complains that China has broken the Russo-Chinese Commercial Treaty by driving all Russian goods out of all ports, and all over the Kanghar-Turkistan frontier. The discovery of this enormity is very opportune, just as China has her hands full with France. Indeed it is one of the most brutal and unprovoked acts of the century. The Russian has always been ready to rock after honey when the bees are engaged elsewhere.

The Courier has the following:—"The Chinese officials have received a telegram from Lungchow, Kwangsi, saying that T'ien Yung had already crossed the frontier and had defeated and annihilated 700 and 800 detachments of over one thousand. General Wang Lung-shan, Panlai of Kwangsi, who attacked the French at T'ien Yung, we regret to hear, died a few days ago from an epidemic now prevailing in Kwangsi. He has been a gloom over the whole army, as he seems to have been the only one in Kwangsi. Pan T'ing-hsin, Futai of Kwangsi, is also reported to be quite ill."

The Shanghai Courier publishes the following news from Tientsin:—"The troops received their pay for the summer, and the Chinese soldiers have been captured and immediately headed at Lungchow. These 'gentlemen of the road' confined their operations between the capital and Tientsin. A large quantity of grain was sent to Tientsin, and the weather cleared on the afternoon of the 26th. The tribute car by way of the Grand Canal has arrived at Tientsin. The Tientsin tribute car and the Tientsin tribute car at Tientsin are daily expected at Lungchow."

The Asiatic Gazette says:—"It has been rumoured amongst the Chinese that the French had suffered a severe defeat in Tientsin. We believe there is a little truth in the rumour, but very little. The severity of a French reverse would be a great blow to the Chinese. However, the Chinese have apparently placed full reliance in this rumour, and are credibly informed that the Tientsin and Admiral Courbet have been defeated. The French ships have been captured and the French ships have been captured. It is further said that no more soldiers are to be sent to the front."

We hear that an attack on the French Cathedral at Canton was threatened by a large mob on Wednesday morning. The authorities had been warned, and a detachment of 800 soldiers were sent to the cathedral to keep the mob in check. A proclamation was afterwards issued commanding the people to keep the peace and to refrain from any disturbance, and quietude was restored. The priests were in the building at the time the mob appeared, and for a time it looked as though they were going to have a rough time. The mob, however, was dispersed, and the cathedral was left in a state of quietude.
